

Nellie Ng is a transformational coach who works with individuals and organizations to support change, growth, and achievement aligned with vision and purpose. With 20 years of experience in the nonprofit sector, Nellie provides keen insight into the unique challenges facing organizations in transition. She has worked with numerous institutions to build capacity, navigate change management, and develop effective and successful strategic plans.

Previously, as Director of Corporate Budget and Planning at nonprofit policy research firm MDRC, Nellie served as a core member of the senior management team providing strategic leadership to the organization. During her tenure there, she managed business development, corporate forecasting and budget processes, and day-to-day operations. Nellie has also worked as a development and fundraising professional at a number of nonprofit organizations, including The Jewish Community Center in Manhattan, The Systemic Lupus Erythematosus Foundation, and United Cerebral Palsy of New York City.

Nellie received her MPA in Nonprofit Financial Management from NYU Wagner and a BA in Asian Studies from Cornell University. She is an Associate Certified Coach (ACC) with the International Coaching Federation (ICF) and Certified Professional Coach with Leadership that Works.

In her leisure time, Nellie enjoys traveling, the arts, reading, baking, and practicing meditation.
