
JENNIFER GIORDANO

Jenn has been an executive coach, trainer, and facilitator for leading organizations for almost two decades. She launched her career, working internally for Morgan Stanley and PwC, and since being external, she has focused her leadership development with the healthcare, biomedical, and pharmaceutical industries. She specializes in coaching leaders during career and organizational transitions, and uses various assessment tools to help individuals and teams understand and value differences. Jenn loves working with people at all career stages, helping them to become clear on their own values, skills, and goals, while aligning these with the needs of those they lead.

Jenn's coaching experience includes working with healthcare CEOs, C-Suite clients for large, nationwide, hospital systems, and transition coaching for newly promoted leaders. She has coached more than 250 millennials.

Jenn is a seasoned coach and facilitator, working with leaders at all levels to help them realize their full potential and put a plan in place to reach their objectives. Her professional background, coupled with her double Masters in counseling and organizational psychology from Columbia University, and her undergraduate degree in Human & Organizational Development from Vanderbilt University, has given her deep skills in the area of executive and team development.